Transmittal by Public Health Services of a six-month update on the status of developing the Division of Community Health and Violence Prevention Services (CHVPS) and the implementation and administration of its public health Community Violence Interruption Programs and the Holistic Assistance Response Teams (HART) program that provides an alternative response model to non-violent 911 calls.

Background and Discussion:

On June 9, 2020, Harris County Commissioner’s Court earmarked $25 million for criminal justice system while also directing departments to explore creating violence prevention and alternative responder programs such as the HART program. On August 20, 2021, the Commissioner’s Court directed Harris County Public Health to establish a new division to implement new and innovative public health approaches that addressed the root causes of violence in order to prevent community violence.

Harris County Public Health has made significant progress in developing these programs including the creation of the divisional structure, programming, staffing, neighborhood selections for the community violence interruption programs, selection of the hospital for the hospital-based violence prevention programming, the selection of a vendor to administer the HART program, collaboration and partnerships, and the overall outreach, education, and communication strategies for the programming.

Expected Impact:

This update will provide the Court with key information regarding the status of the implementation of these programs and the key actions to be taken to launch the programs in Spring 2022. This update will provide the Court with an opportunity to ask questions and provide additional direction to the Department as it moves forward with program implementation.
